

Investing in diversity & inclusion

30-08-2018

Kate Jenkins

Stan Grant

The appetite of Tasmanian leaders and businesses to focus on diversity and inclusion (D&I) has never been stronger. There is growing recognition that D&I is socially and morally the right thing to do AND it makes good business sense.

The evidence is clear, organisations that prioritise and invest in diversity and inclusion are winning, and those that don't are losing (McKinsey, Delivering Through Diversity report, January 2018).

The objective of the Include Conference is to provide Tasmanian leaders and organisations with best practice tips, insights and inspiration on how to drive more inclusion within their organisations and more broadly across the Tasmanian community.

Rest assured, this won't be your typical sit and listen conference. There will be plenty of opportunities for attendees to reflect, discuss and co-design innovative ways to become diversity champions.

The conference will include several renowned Tasmanian and national thought leaders across a range of diversity and inclusion topics.

Keynote Speakers

Kate Jenkins

Federal Sex Discrimination Commissioner

Kate Jenkins became Australia's Sex Discrimination Commissioner in 2016. Kate is leading a number of projects at the Australian Human Rights Commission, including a national inquiry into sexual harassment in Australian workplaces.

She also worked on the recently released report on the results of the national survey on sexual harassment and sexual assault at university, the Commission's fourth sexual harassment prevalence survey and continuing the Commission's collaborative project on cultural reform with the Australian Defence Force.

Kate is the convener of the National Male Champions of Change group (established 2015), and the Co-Chair of Play by the Rules, a joint project between human rights agencies and sports commissions to make grass roots sports safe, fair and inclusive.

Stan Grant

Indigenous Affairs Editor for the Australian Broadcasting Corporation and special advisor to the Prime Minister on Indigenous constitutional recognition

Stan Grant is a Wiradjuri man whose latest book Talking to My Country is a powerful and personal meditation on race, culture and national identity. A journalist since 1987, Stan has covered some of the world's biggest news events and has received a string of prestigious international and Australian awards.

He published his memoir, The Tears of Strangers in 2002 and in 2015, he won a Walkley award for his coverage of indigenous affairs. He is Managing Editor of National Indigenous Television, Indigenous Affairs Editor at The Guardian and International Editor at Skynews.
